

Burgess Hill Town Council

PRESS RELEASE

19 October 2020

BUILDING COMMUNITY ENTERPRISE IN BURGESS HILL

Bucking the doom and gloom nationally, 2 new enterprises will open their doors to the public of Burgess Hill on Saturday 24 October with more to come. This follows negotiations between Robert Eggleston, Leader of Burgess Hill Town Council and New River Retail, landlord of Martlets shopping centre to provide favourable leases to promote new businesses and organisations in the town.

The town has watched with dismay as shops closed in anticipation of the proposed redevelopment of the centre. Unfortunately, negative trading on the High Street and Covid 19 has delayed the development and rather than continue to have empty shop units the Town Council decided to do something about it.

Keen to promote new businesses and bring activity back to the centre of town, the Town Council is providing an affordable opportunity for new entrepreneurs to set-up by helping with the fit-out and negotiating favourable lease terms.

In addition, a monthly market has been established with 25 stalls selling a variety of home produce and bespoke goods which is helping to bring life back to the town centre.

Council Leader, Robert Eggleston said: "as a Town Council we refused to standby and allow these units to remain empty. Lifting trading activity and improving footfall is vitally important to us so that we get the breathing space we need before any redevelopment takes place. We have no control over the redevelopment and cannot say when, or if, it will happen. But what we can do is bridge the gap and give opportunities to local entrepreneurs and support the local economy through incredibly difficult circumstances. I am delighted to welcome Scrapless, Remake Fashion and The Kiln into the town and know that they will make a positive difference. I wish all three success."

Scrapless and Remake Fashion, located in the former William Hill Interiors unit, bring new concepts to the town. In a bid to support the environment, Scrapless will sell foodstuffs, household goods and essentials without the environmentally damaging plastic packaging. Customers bring their own reusable containers which are filled and weighed at the shop thus saving on plastic packaging. The shop will be introducing other lines such as locally sourced bakery goods and fruit and vegetables. It will also provide information and workshops on how to help save our planet by supporting easy yet effective steps to sustainable buying.

Meg King of Scrapless said "I can't wait for us to open the doors to Scrapless and be able to provide our community with a more convenient and more accessible way to reduce waste. I want people to realise that they don't have to be perfect at being waste free. Just starting with refilling your cleaning products will help you save money and help save the planet. We have around 130 different food and cleaning products for refilling and home ware products as well to get you going in this new lifestyle. There is something for all.

Remake Fashion is an innovative sustainable fashion store selling, new, pre-loved and upcycled clothing and accessories. Remake offers a beautifully curated selection of garments from the high street to designer. Their philosophy is that clothes can be 're-loved' and the styling of garments is key. Fast fashion is damaging both environmentally and socially and Remake Fashion will help to reverse that trend. Proprietor Katy Wright said "I feel passionately about the impact that the fashion industry is having both environmentally and socially around the world. I want to offer an alternative to fast fashion whilst supporting the sustainable fashion movement. I hope that my store will offer the local and wider community an alternative whilst still having style and fantastic clothing at its heart"

Alongside Scrapless and Remake Fashion, The Kiln, a project developed by the Burgess Hill Shed, will be opening its doors in November having taken over the former Argos unit.

The Kiln provides an opportunity for people with skills to manufacture and recycle useful items. Closely aligned to The Shed on the business park, The Kiln allows, in particular, retired artisans to practice their skills in a friendly, unrushed situation and provide the opportunity for local people to release creativity, share interests and skills, pursue hobbies and participate in worthwhile community projects. In addition, The Kiln provides a venue for community events and is home to the Repair Café.

Trustee of the Burgess Hill Shed, Eric Palmer said, "our experience in developing Burgess Hill Shed, has shown that sensible action with community participation can achieve a great deal, and we believe that this philosophy can be applied in the same way to create an open community space in the town centre for the enjoyment of everyone.

Finally, the Burgess Hill Pantry is due to open in January 2021. This charity will provide support for residents hardest hit by the current economic situation. Members will benefit from low cost foodstuffs and essentials provided through the Fareshare Charity.

Negotiations with 2 more entrepreneurs and another charity are at an advanced stage. It is hoped that more shops in this quarter of the town's shopping centre will be reoccupied over the next few months.

Left to right - Meg King of Scrapless, Eric Palmer of The Kiln, Katy Wright of Remake Fashion, and Councillor Robert Eggleston, Leader of Burgess Hill Town Council

Meg King of Scrapless

Katy Wright of Remake Fashion

Eric Palmer of The Kiln

ENDS

For more information please contact Steve Cridland, 01444 238208

Press Office
Burgess Hill Town Council
01444 247726

